

Foreword

THIS work is something more than a book ; it is your own complete library on every subject, written simply and accurately, and illustrated by a wealth of pictures in a way never before attempted. Here you hold the world in your hands.

It is a very intimate companion. You will make the acquaintance of the famous folk of all countries and of all ages. Mighty conquerors and explorers, scientists and statesmen, inventors and thinkers, authors and artists, healers and poets, people its pages. The thrilling story of the amazing triumphs of Man over the giant forces of Nature is told in so attractive a way that it will appeal to every reader from nine to ninety. You can take delightful journeys to strange lands seated in your own comfortable chair, and enjoy the pageant of the passing throng from North to South and from East to West. All that others have fought for and gained is yours. The trees and flowers of the field, our friends and foes of the animal kingdom, the treasures that are buried in the pockets of Mother Earth are illustrated and described in their endless variety.

CASSELL'S CHILDREN'S BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE is the first alphabetical work of its kind to be published in this country. The great advantage of this plan is that it enables you to survey a subject in a single article. It is not necessary to turn to a dozen different headings. Should there be further details elsewhere, you are told in the concluding paragraph exactly where to find them. The Easy Reference Fact-Index at the end of the work is not only an index, but a vast store of additional information not sufficiently vital for inclusion in other pages. It pronounces, defines, explains and locates.

This work is entirely new. From first to last it has cost some £200,000 to produce. Every article has
